

"I read Chinese Language and Literature at the university. For me, classical Chinese and Latin are like twin sisters separated at birth, brought up in different environments and miraculously share a similar fate: both were written lingua franca in their respective cultural spheres for thousand years; both were incredibly concise in comparison with their modern counterparts; both reflected the characters of their own civilizations..." Ka Ki Chan